

Peo:

Their metaphors are very interesting, because when we compare with something in Japan, if we see something, we say "oh, it looks like Tokyo tower".

If we see Eiffel Tower, "it looks like a Tokyo tower". right?

Or if we see a big building in USA, we say "oh, it looks like Roppongi Hills". We do these metaphors.

But those two guys, Billy and Oscar, are very interesting to see, because they do the animal metaphors.

For instance, yesterday, we went to Odaiba, and we passed the bridge. On the bridge, we came to Yamanotesen, Yamanote-line, the train, Billy was screaming, "oh it looks like a big snake".

超デカイ蛇みたい

And we really loved it, because it's natural to do this and it's so fun.

That is the fantastic environment they come from.
